

$25,316 Award Reversed In Jewelry Firm Case

Judge James Morris yesterday reversed a District Court jury's award of $25,316 damages last month against Leon Tashof, owner of the New York Jewelry Co.

In ordering a new trial, Judge Morris ruled that the jury finding for Mr. and Mrs. William J. Brown, 312 Rittenhouse street N.W., was contrary to the weight of evidence.

Mrs. Brown had filed the suit against her former employer, charging the firm forced her and her husband to handle $10,000 of their funds to meet company shortages for which, Mr. Tashof charged, she was responsible.

The company charged that Mrs. Brown signed statements admitting her responsibility for certain shortages while cashier for the jewelry firm in 1948. She denied this, contending she signed the statements under duress. Her husband entered the suit on the claim that company agents trespassed on his home to collect some of the money from him and his wife.

Religious Beliefs Ruled No Barrier to Jury Call

A person's religious beliefs against jury service do not excuse him from answering a court summons to appear at a given time as a prospective juror.

This was learned yesterday by a man who was locked up for one hour in the cellblock at District Court for contempt of court for failing to show up as a prospective juror on Tuesday.

The man, LaFayette O'Neal Carter, 35, colored, of the 3700 block of Hayes street N.E., went to court yesterday, after a deputy clerk had telephoned his home. Mr. Carter told Judge David A. Pine, who found him in contempt, that he is a Moslem and is not permitted to serve on a jury.

Judge Pine first ordered Mr. Carter to pay a $10 fine, for contempt and ordered him locked up, pending payment. The judge, however, reconsidered and later waived the fine and let Mr. Carter go free.

Veterans' Aid Given To 7,758,000 So Far

About 7,758,000 veterans, one-half of all World War II ex-servicemen, have received educational or job aid from the Government, the Veterans Administration said yesterday. It placed the cost at about $12 billion.

That averages out to $1,500 of aid for each veteran who has taken advantage of the GI bill or the Vocational Rehabilitation Act. The latter, passed in 1943, is a program reserved for disabled veterans needing aid to overcome their handicaps.

Fall enrollments in schools and colleges under both laws, VA said, are down 20 per cent from last year. Total enrollment in all types of schools, from grade through postgraduate schools, was 1,293,500 on November 1. A year ago it was 1,628,700.

College - level training has dropped most sharply, from a peak of 1,245,300 in the fall of 1947 to about 550,000 today.

Only 188,200 veterans are taking on-the-job training now, VA said. The peak in that part of the program, often called "earn while you learn," was 720,500 in early 1947. The first big overhaul job done on the GI bill was aimed at on-the-job training fater it was found that some high-paid executives were receiving a Government allowance while "training" for a still higher position. Congress put a ceiling on earnings,
